

Knesset defeats motions against Eilon Moreh in rowdy session

By ARYCH RUBINSTEIN Post Knesset Reporter

In one of the rowdiest Knesset sessions in memory, the House yesterday defeated motions for the agenda criticizing the establishment last week of the settlement of Eilon EM Morch, near Nablus. The motions were presented by MKs Yosef Sarid (Alignment) and Tawfik Touhi (Democratic Front). EVISION

Sarid said that up to now a national consensus had existed, more or less, but now Prime Minister Menahem Begin had destroyed that consensus. Even if the prime minister thought that Eilon Moreh contributed something to the country's security. didn't the national conseneus, however fragile, contribute even more to security? Was it worthwhile to huild Eilon Moreh and destroy that consensus? he asked.

There was considerable heckling during Sarid's speech, hut when Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon replied, no hoids were harred. Certainly in the ninth Knesset, which even before yesterday was no model of decorum, there had been no session in which insults were traded so freely and in which the adversaries so obviously hated each other.

Sharon annoyed the opposition even before he began speaking by having decided to reply after Sarid and Toubi had spoken, even though two other motions - hy coalition members - on the same subject were scheduled to be heard. Ordinarily, a minister gives one reply to all motions on a particular sub-when Sharon explained that he wanted to distinguish." between the non-Zionist motions and the Zionist motions" their annoyance gave way to examperation. And they did not hemitate to express it. Sharon said that the decision to es-

No "fifth column" would halt the march of Zionism, Sharon caid, and no band of hypocrites would succeed in eabotaging true Zionism. .'Who is this fifth column?'' shonted MK Uri Avnery several times. "You must tell us!" Sharon said that he had complain-

(Halaby is a Druse, and there have en complaints in the past that, as a non-Jew: he should not be entrusted with reporting for television on events in Judea and Samaria.)

Sharon's sarcastic phrase, "that trustworthy reporter," evoked another lengthy round of heckling, in which it was difficult to hear who was saying what. Autonomy team wants to limit American role

By ANAN SAFADI

Post Mideast Affairs Editor Members of Israel's ministerial negotiating team on the proposed West Bank autonomy have demanded that the U.S. delegates to the talks not raise subjects for discussion. They have also demanded that the U.S. not be a party to projected agreements.

The Israeli ministers have nended that the U.S. role be confined to what was laid down in the Camp David guidelines. Jerusalem interprets these as defining the American delegation's task as mediation, not a partnership in the decision-making.

The Israeli negotiators made their recommendations when they met vesterday with Premier Menahem Begin to report on the second round of the autonomy talks held in Alexan-dria on Monday and Tuesday. One unnamed minister was quoted as saying that he felt as if the team was negotiating with the U.S rather than the Egyptians on autonomy for the West Bank and Gaza. Other ministers reported their impression that the Americans were coordinating their moves closely with the Egyptians, and that the U.S. delegates were pressing their own proposals and asserting that their role in the antonomy negotiations was an active ons. The memhers of the Israel negotiating tsam are Interior Minister Yoeef Burg, Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan, Defence Minister Ezer Weizman, Justice

Minister Shmuel Temir, Agricultur Minister Ariel Sharon and Minister without Portfolio Moshe Nissim. A delegation of experts of the Egyptian Foreign Ministry is to come to Israel early next week, probably Monday or Tuesday, to discuss and possibly finalize the agenda for the June 25 meeting at the Ac-cadia Hotel in Herziiya of the joint sutonomy committee

Wolf Blitzer adds from Washington: Secretary of State Cyrus Vance said yesterday that "no real progress" has been achieved at the autonomy talks "so far."

"But that is not surprising to me at the start of this very difficult negotiation — a negotiation which is unlike any prior negotiations because issues are being dealt with that have never heen touched before," Vance told a State Department news conference.

He said the autonomy talks invoived "very difficult and sensitive issues from the political standpoint on both sides."

"But I think," Vance cootinued, "that the process has now started and that the parties, with our heip, will pursue these negotiations, hopefully to a successful conclusion."

Sources in Jerusalem repeated yesterday that Dayan has asked Washington for clarification of how the U.S. sees its own status at the talke. Dayan asked that the clarification be conveyed before the next session of the autonomy talks convenes in Herzliva on June 25.

Yadin's gruelling tour in sweltering Upper Egypt got the better of him and forced him to cancel several engagements.

Yadin cancelled at the jast-minute a meeting with Minister of Social Affairs Dr. Amal Othman.

In his next engagement, Yadin was to have met with Gen. All at the defence ministry. But All came to see Yadin because of Yadin's condition. Yadin rested last night in preparatioo for a meeting with Sadat in Alexandria today.

At Cairo University, Yadin talked shop with the rector, Ihrahim Badran, and with Dr. Abdul-Aziz Saleh, dean of the archeology faculty. They discussed archeology and Islamic art for two hours.

Zimbabwe hails Senate call to end sanctions

SALISBURY. - The new Zimbabwe-Rhodesia government, led by Bishop Abel Muzorewa, had a mixed reaction yesterday to Tuesday night's U.S. Senate vote calling on the Carter administration to lift the trade eanctions imposed on Rhodesie during the years of rebel rule hy the white minority government led hy Ian Smith.

The Muzorewa government, though pleased with the outcome of the Senate vote, accused the U.S. administration of practising a "hankrupt pollcy" towards Zimbebwe-Rhodesia, because of the likelihood that Preeldent Jimmy Carter will use the presidential veto to kill congressional attempts to end the canctions.

Carter administration officials were also pleased with the Senate vote, though for very different reasons. The 52-41 margin in favour of lifting the restrictions was much closer than tbcy had expected, after a similar move contained in a nonbinding resolution four weeks ago had passed by 75-19. The officials said the 41 votes that followed the administration line gave Carter a firm base to exercise his veto if need be.

House of Representatives Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill said yester-day that he thought the House would follow the Senate'e lead in voting to lift the sanctions. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance spent eeveral bours on Tuesday telling members of both houses that lifting sanctions now would be disastrous for American interests among the nations of black

A Zimhabwe-Rhodesia foreign ministry spokesman disclosed yesterday that the new government had ecnt two memhers of Muzorewa's ruling United African National Council, Dr. Jamee Kamusikiri and Jonathan Masvosve, to the U.S. to lobby for support and to arrange Muzorewa's projected trip there, scheduled for next month. Muzorewa was invited by Senator Jesse Helms (Democrat, North Carolina). Vance has said he would he "delighted" to see Muzorswa if he

on roads into Arab area TEHERAN. - Iranian authorities yesterday clamped a dusk-to-dawn ourfew heginning tomorrow on roads connecting Iraq with southwest Iran's oil-rich ethnic Arah province, where guerrillas elashed with government forces last month. The measure was announced by state radio, and marked a deterioration in relations between Iran and Iraq after a series of incidents which have marred more than four years of reconciliation.

Authorities said the roads connecing the oil-rich Khuzestan province to the southern Iraq region would be closed from 9 p.m. to 6 a.m.

Iran first charged that Iraq was smuggling arms into Khuzestan when fighting flared in the port city of Khorramshahr last month between ethnic Arabs and government forces. The charges have since been repeated every day. The radio said authorities in Khuzestan had also decided to allow those "faithful to the Islamic revolution" to carry arms. The order would effectively declare illegal any arms in the hands of ethnic Arabs who fought government forces last month when told to surrender their arsenals of Soviet-made weapons and guns seized from army barracks during the revolution.

Meanwhlle, the press here reported that Iraql ambassador Abdul Malek al-Yassin had apologized to Iran's Prime Minister Mehdi tack on Kurdish villages in Iran and had told him the incident was an "error." Al-Yassin said Iraq's government was prepared to pay compensation for damage caused by the air raid.

In other developments, Iran's strongman Ayatoliah Khomeini accused countries of both the western and eastern blocs of 'turning people into animals and pushing civilization towards savagery.

The ''Volce of the Ielamle Republic" radio said the ayatollah was addressing a group of new amhassadors about to represent the revolutionary regime abroad. One of the new amhassadors is Deputy Premier Amir Entezam, who will be going to Sweden.

In Iran's continuing wave of executions, a Teheran revolutionary court yesterday executed one man on charges of homosexuality and corrupting minors, the state radio reported. And In Gorgan, northeastern Iran, a policeman was shot on charges of being "corrupt on earth.

LONDON (UPI). - Dr. Magnus Pyke views the efforts of American researchers to create a perfectly eafe society with a measure of coneern. In his opinion as one of the best known - and most entertaining sclentists in Britain, there is and can with arms that fiail as be talks - an interview, in fact, involves ducking a series of rights and lefts. In action he looks like be was thought up in a cartoon story conference at the Disney studios. But his head is grey with the wisdom of many years and his opinion is eagerly sought on televi-sion as a lecturer and author. The Americans, be said recently, asem to be suffering from a series of acute anxieties crupting in consumer protests and environment demonstrations on subjects ranging from nuclear contamination to saccharine in soft drinks. He shares very few of these forebodings. Some of them, in fact, he said, are provoked by the normal advance of ccience which can now refine ltc measurements to billionths and has discovered along the way that, for example, the delicious tuna contains some mercury as, indeed, it always has.

"If you were an unemployed Scottish labourer leaning against the post office in Aberdeen," he said, "you would be absorbing enough radiation from the granite of which It is built to give Ralph Nader a heart attack. Science you must remember is not the absolute truth - it is the minimization of doubt. We now de-mand tests of food and drink so stringent that if Sir Walter Raleigh turned up today with the potato as a new and unknown food, he would never stand a chance of having it accepted.

"Potatoes contain a poisonous sub-stance, solanine. But the wide use of potatoes and the extreme rarity of harm from their consumption shows there is little cause for alarm from the knowledge they contain a toxic substance."

What is it," mused the former secretary of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, "that leads a community to regard the precence of some toxle chemicals with tolerant indulgence while viewing with outraged horror ready. Take fresh air, he said. Does the average man really know what. there is in the "fresh air" for which he is fighting - now that we can measure infinitesimal fractions? Since science got to work on it we now know it to contain, along with nitrogen and oxygen, water vapour and carbon dioxide, a whole catalogue of other material - argon, neon, xenon, krypton and hellum, organic ebemicals from the waxes on the leaves of jungle trees in the Amazon basin, sulphur compounds from volcanoes, radioactive entities from granite rocks. "Carrying out our analysis for parts per million and per billion down to parts per trillion, bow dif-ficult we make it, to be surc, to define in scientific terms what fresh air is," he said. "Why is it that so many people see rather the analytical evidence brought to light by new sophisticated technology — a newly-discovered state called pollution - and not the complex subtlety of fresh air, the same air breathed by our ancestors?

Hs also wondered aloud why watercress, borseradisb and rhuharh, all of which can be shown to contain toxic chemicals, have been gladly accepted in western diets for generations if not centuries without citizens taking to the streets, yet nuclear energy is believed to be insidiously doing the average man barm although nothing obvious bas actually happened.

"attention deserves to be paid to the estimate that about two cases of cancer e year could he due to the (nuclear) processing plant at Windscale (in Britain) .-But while this is so, equal attention must be given to the fact that in burning coal we distribute about 100 tons of Uranium and its decay products a year into the environment. The present evidence thus implies that because of this the number of deathe from cancer wo be very considerably reduced if the power stations burning coal and oil were replaced by nuclear ones, quite apart from saving the lives of the coal miners who annually contract pneumoconiosis or are killed in 20-

SALT II SET FOR SHAKE-UP

AFTER SEVEN years Regotiations between Washington and Moscow, Presidents Carter and Brezhnev are just a few days away from signing the second Strategic Arme Limitation Agreement, or Salt II. Champagne, however, would be premature. Indeed, what might prove to be the most frustrating negotiation of all is about to begin in the N.S. Senate:

To understand this it is necessary to go back to the American Constitution, that terse but all-powerful document. The president "shall have power, by and with the Advice and Consent of the Senate, to make, Treaties, provided two-thirds of the Senators present concur." Assuming all 100 senators show up on voting day, nothing less than 67 votes will be sufficient to approve the treaty. Put another way, it will only take 34 votes to undo all that has been done. Although it appears to have been the intention of the Constitution's framers that the Senate would act as an advisory council, participating fully in the making of treaties, this quickly proved unworkable. Instead, the executive branch took on the responsibility for negotiating a treaty with a foreign government, and.

then presented it to the Senate for the required two-thirds approval. This free hand to negotiate came at a high price though: no longer did the Senate feel bound to consent to what only the President bad arrang-

ALL THE SAME, the Senate has rarely taken the step of actually rejecting a proposed treaty. In some cases, it simply refused to vote; after 30 years, the U.S. has yet to ratify the Genocide Convention. More common is another course. that of modifying the treaty after it has been negotiated and presented to the Senate. Unless the Salt debate gets hung up on the question of whether the U.S. can adequately monitor or verify Sovist com-pliances with the treaty, this is the route the debate is most likely to follow. Modifications can be of three general types. Least controversial are the addition of "understandings" or "interpretations," which clarify parts of the treaty without altering By RICHARD HAASS/London their legal effect. For example, it is already clear that several pro-Salt senators will offer an understanding to the effect that nothing in the protocel, that part of the treaty dealing with restrictions lasting only until the end of 1981, will be extended without formal Senate approval at that time. Moscow won't like this, but there is nothing they can de about it as it is only a move of pelitical rather than legal significance.

Far more troubling are "reser-rations," which state that nothing in the treaty precludes the U.S. from taking certain steps on its ewn. Indeed. it was a host of reservations added to the Versailles Treaty containing the League of Nations Covenant after the First World War that eo undermined the treaty that President Wilson's supporters felt ebliged to vote against what they had initially desired. Half a century later, it is probable that senators will seek reservations enabling the U.S. to go ahead with certain weapone programmee. If they are euccessful, it will be a Soviet decision whether or not to go along.

THE MOST SERIOUS type of change, and the one sure to provoke the anger of the Carter Administration and the wrath of Brezhnev, is the actual amending of the treaty itself. Quite likely are attempts to inelnde the medium-range Seviet Backfire bomber in Soviet totals, or to reduce the number of "heavy" long range missiles the Soviets are presently permitted.

Equally, conators might try to ex-empt certain U.S. forces from constraints that have been agreed to by the Carter Administration. If any of these amendments are adopted, negetiations would have to be reopened; if the Soviets are to be believed, they would refuse to do so. Salt II could well be still-born.

Thus the path of modifying Salt holds two major attractions to its opponents in the Senate. First, they require only a simple, rather than a two-thirds majority, to be adopted. Second, it is both politically and psychelogically casier to vote to "improve" Salt by favouring changes than it is to be seen as being against Sait. Indeed, if efforts to amend Sait are successful, it is not too difficult te imagine many ef its original critics voting for the final version and its original advocatec voting against. The challenge facing the Carter

Thursday, June 14, 1979

team after the Vienna summit is thus how to prevent the destruction of Salt through piecemeal changes. Some vetes will have to be purchased with promises of new weapon evatems or finance for various projects in the beme states of recalcitrant eenators. Some minor changes in the treaty will have to he permitted es that the Senate can he seen as exerting its influence, but limited so us not to bring about Soviet rejection

Much of 1979, if not beyond, will be taken up with this matter. If one considers the Panama Canal Treaty debate and the more recent energy votes, it is not at all clear the Carter Administration is up to the task. If not, Salt could prove to be the final undoing of Jimmy Carter's presideney.

The new Socialist strength will lie in a close agreement with the email parties of the centre-left, mainly the Republicane and the Social Democrats. The Sociallets may attempt to gain the support of the centre-right liberals as well, but they will find no friends among the triumphant Radicals.

The Radical Party has campalgned against the political establishment, denouncing corruption and demanding civil liberties and the abolition of a large number of repressive fascist laws.

Marco Panneila, leader of the Radical Party, has accused the traditional Italian politiciane of practicing "ammucchiata," an abusive term meaning to go ene on top of the other.

TO CELEBRATE Revolution Day iast Septemher, the government eponsored a photographic exhibition designed to portray the injustices and inequalities of life under the late Emperor Haile Selaasie.

The exhibition consisted of two ceriec of picturee. In the first Selassie was eeen presiding over a sumptuous state banquet, surrounded by dozens of beaming and ebviously affluent guests. In the se-cond, bundrede of etarving Ethiopians were shown begging for food in the dreught-etricken provinces.

On the day the exhibition epened, Ethiopia's strongman Lt: Col. At that moment, with the country again in the grip of famine, Ethiopians again. were starving and dying in distant provinces.

The irony may have been lost on Mengistu, who as a young soldier eerved Selassie on the palace staff as a haggage handler and logistice coordinator. Whether Moscow is willing to make that kind of an investment for a toehold in the Horn of Africa is not certain, even though Moscow'e in-fluence in Ethiopia already has permeated all levels of government.

The speech, delivered at a public rally, startled independent oheervers hecause Ethiopia and China had enjoyed cerdial relations and China had sent 200 technicians to Ethiepia, working mostly in agricultural development.

China and the West, though both have severely strained relations with Ethiopia, provide about three-quarters of the $117m. in loans listed in the current budget. The Soviet, Union's main contribution has been $1b. in military hardware provided over the past two years - an invest-ment Moscow presumably would

The election has left the ruling Christian Democrats, who lost one seat in the Chamber of Deputies but gained three in the Senate, facing some hard bargaining to form a government that can command a majority. The Communists who lost 26 seats in the lower house and seven in the Senate, are in no condition to offer an alternative.

The key to the Italian political abyrinth is now beld by the Socialists, despite their disappointing results. (They gained five Senate seats and three in the Chamber of Deputice.)

In the previous parliament there was a theoretical possibility of a coalition of the left - Socialists and Communists - as has happened in many regional and city gevernmente. The Communiet decline means this is no longer possible.

Other prominent father-and-son teame, in what is now planned as an annual event, are Bachar, Frischer, Lewin, Manadorf, Perkis, Rachaminov, Sinai, Solman and Stampo. The remaining seedings will be announced today.

Mets set club record with 10-run inning

The Jerusalem Post

NEW YORK (AP). - Frank Taveras' two-run double and Doug Flynn's inside-the-park, three-run homer keyed a club-record 10-run sixth inning that enabled the New York Mets to take a 12-6 victory over the Cincinnati Reds Tuesday night.

Thursday, June 14, 1979

Counled with Cincinnati'e five runs in the top of the frame, the total of 15 runs came within two of the modern National League record for runs scored in a eingle inning by two tcame. The mark of 17 was set in 1912 by the old Boston Braves and New York Giants.

Before Tuesday night, the Mets had scored no more than eight runs in one inning, but they did it on several oscasions, the last time against the Chicago Cubs in 1976.

Taveras' double drove in the eecond and third runs of the Mets' big sixth, tying the game and wiping out a 5-2 Cincinnati lead. Flynn'e homer soared over the head of centre fielder Cesar Geronimo, bouncing off the wall, scoring Willie Montanez and Steve Henderson ahead of him. In other National League action, Mike Schmidt'e two-run homer in the fifth inning, Philadelphia's first hit of the game, triggered the Phillies to a 4-0 victory over the Houston Astros behind the six-hit pitching of Nino Espinosa.

In the American League, Roy White and Mickey Rivers stroked run-scoring singles in a three-run ninth inning that gave the New York Yankees a 4-1 vietory over the Minnesota Twins behind the four-hit pitching of Ron Guidry and Ron Davis.

Thursday, June 14, 1979 The Jerusalem Post Page Seven

HERE IS the story as it really happened.

When I was collecting material for my book "Altalena" I took it as a matter of course to contact Yisrael Galili, the man who had been a close aide of David Ben Gurion, Israel's first premier and defence minister in a those dark days of Juns 1948.

Tig. The Altalena was an IZL boat carrying arms and fighters which the Irgun began organizing some months before the establishment of the state but which set sail for Israel a few weeks after that event. Most of Its arms were given to the IZL by the French government, and Its pascengers were Holocaust survivors. Although the ship's arrival had the Israel government's approval, a sharp disagreement broke out between the government and the IZL command (which acted under government approval in integrating Irgun fighters into the IDF) over the arms' distribution. This escalated to bloodshed and the destruction of the vessel by shelling. The toll of life was heavy: 16 dead among the IZL men. with three IDF fatalities.

It was on May 5, 1971 that I wrote to Galili asking him "to meet me to answer questions on this subject, even if not for quotation or direct attribution." Four days later I received a reply from his secretary -Galili was then a minister-withoutportfolio - to the effect that "the letter has been passed on to the minister

On June 13, 1971 I wrote again to Galili, asking for a clearcut answer. A fortnight later, his aide advised me that the minister "has no time to epare now for the subject of your book. This letter also said that in view of the minister's bitter experience with various other publications, be boped to publish his own version of the events concerned. In response to this, I proposed the following "deal": if the minister would grant me an interview. I would submit to him the prcpublication copy of all those parts of the manuscript referring to him. But the reply was once more in the negativc.

THE POSSESSION of land has been fiercely and furiously defended since time immemorial, and there is practically no country on earth that does not bave a blstory of bloody tratricidal equabbles over land. Even today, when modern concepts of communal living and coownership could be expected to have tempered the primeval urge to fight for possession of land, there is nothing more calculated to rouse the passions of even the mildest of persous than the threat of being dispoesessed of even the smallest modicum of real estate.

Nevertbeless, the demande of modern living are such that private property must often be expropriated for the general good of the public in order to implement town planning schemes, or for purposes of slum clearance, or road construction, etc. In consequence, most countries have soms form of law, subject to suitable safeguards, for the compulsory acquisition of private proper ly for enterprises beneficial to the public, For, example, in the U.S., there is the institution known as 'eminent domain.'

In Israel, there are several laws under which property may be expropriated, but the two most imporare the Land (Acquisition for

WHO WRITES HISTORY? I applied time and again to Galili - during chance encounters in the Knesset restaurant, at meetings of the Labour Party central committee and via mediators from among his closest friends — all to no avail. I was thus obliged to make do without Galili's interview, and my book came out with the title "Altalena." (It set off sharp echoes and caused arguments and discussions; and this week its sixth edition is due out). What I wrote apparently did not please Galili at all, for he reacted very sharply. It seems very likely that if he had consented to grant me that interview, he might well have clarified certain episodes that still beg a number of questions, for he was really deeply involved in this episode and his word was almost law. But he preferred to stay ellent, setting up a fue and cry only after its publication.

ONE OF THE COMPLAINTS he voiced in his interview with your. political correspondent, Mark Segal, (The Jerusalem Post, January 20) paid me a somewhat dubious compliment: Galili accused me of making a massive effort to rewrite the history of the War of Independence, and of representing him as the villain of the plecc in the Altalena affair. In his version of events it was Yiscael Galili who was the restraining agent on the late David Ben-Gurlon during that tragic incident when the latter feared that a "putsch" was being attempted. Thus, since my book does not, in Galill'e opinion, gibe with his picture of the events, it is therefore, "a massive, bid to rewrite history."

Among the charges imputed to me, Galili points to an attempt to minimize the role of the Haganah in the pre-independence struggle. Indeed? My book explicitly states that the Haganah was the largest of the organisations fighting for independence. True I also mentioned the late David Ben-Gurion's criticism of the Haganah and Its preparedness for tha War of Independence, For, when Ben-Gurion took over defence affairs in the Zionist Executive and proceeded to look into the Yishuy's defence prior to the State's establishment, he was indeed sharply critical of what was going on in the Haganah and beld that in fact It was not ready for confrontation with the Arab countries. He had an extremely sharp exchange with the Haganah commanders and took them sternly to task. And I, for my email part, have relied on this mighty figure, for mc the supreme authority on everything relating to the official leadership of the Yishuv's defence organization in those days.

This is surely the right juncture to mention that Galili and his closest associatee, men such as the late Minister Aharon Zisling, were then among Ben-Gurion's bitterest adversaries on these issues. This issue of the wars of the Jews in 1948 is not one that can be all that easily set aside. The Altalena affair was not its main focus, for it was, after all, only one of a series of stormy incidents from those days. There were, for example, the removal of Yisrael Galili from his post as head of the national command of the Haganah --- close to the time of the Altalena incident: the dissolution of the Palmah HQ; the reorganization of the defence establishment; the struggle over army appointments. And all were accompanied by reballous utterancee from the generals and threats of resignations from the just-formed IDF.

IN THE COURSE of these events, the following cpisode took place: On June 3, 1948, at the height of the War of Independence when its outcome was etill unclear, the leadership of Mapam convened for a closed meeting. Under discussion was no less than a proposal to eeek Ben-Gurlon'e dismissal from the Defence Ministry and to have him court-martialicd. (What must be remembered here is that Mapam was then composed of Hashomer Hatsair and Abdut Ha'avoda -Galili'e own party -- and that It was represented in the coalition government by two ministers. At that time, too, most of the senior army command were Mapam membera.)

(Fred Casesnik)

The full minutes of the abovementioned mceting are in my possession; reading the record of such a discussion, held at the height of a battle for the fledgling Jowish state's very survival, one can only wonder what to call it: a bid to usurp the defence minister, the direct commander of the war, or merely the usually accepted parliamentary game

In all bumility, may I eay that it is not I who am seeking to rewrite history. No, an effort of quite another type is being made: an attempt to damage my book by presenting it as e one-sided document, by purposely ignoring the facts I included in it.

And now for a look at some of the things mentioned by Galili in his interview with Mark Segal. • I did not precent Galili as a bas bsen seized by the military government, this was done either by virtus of international law, which allowe eeizing land in oocupied territorise for military outposts or security settlements, or by virtue of the 1953 Jordanian law with respect to acquisition of property for public purposes, which is very similar to our own Land (Acquisition for Public

Up to the present it has been the practice of the military government to expropriate only the use of such lands on a temporary basis, and not outright ownership thereof. Furthermore, although under international law, payment for the use of occupied land for military and security purposes may be postponed till the cessation of hostilities and the signing of a peacs treaty, the Israel Government has seen fit to pay immediately for the use of any land seized by the military government, at a rate fixed by special committees set up for the purpose of assessing the compensation due to the landowners.

villain'', in regard to his role in the bloody confrontation of the 'Altalena'' affair. All I did was to describe, quite objectively, what he did and what stepe be took as the liaison between the premier and defence minister and the IZL command (which was then operating with the authority of the IDF high command). In fact what Galili wants to do is to divert attention from the main issue, namely that the fate of the Altalena hinged on how matters were precentad to the defence minister. The final outcome was certainly bad. How did Galili in fact present the subject to Ben-Gurion? There is no mention of the subject in the defence miniater'e diarlee. Galili's version is his and his own alone. The late Levi Eshkol, the third party (to the discussion), also left no record of the conversation. But Galili's involvement certainly did leave clear traces in different publications and among eye witnesses. It was on these that I relied when compiling my book. THE MOST INNOVATIVE and refreshing revelation is Galili's claim to have been the restraining agent on Ben-Gurion in the Altalena affair. In other words it was the first premier and defence minister who "the villain". Perhaps Galili will do posterity a favour and enlighten us on those original ideas or ordere issued by the defence minister that he, Galili, was sup-posed to have restrained? What, in fact, could have been worse than sinking the boat by artillery fire? • Gallll chose to quote from Micbael Bar-Zobar'e biograpby "Ben-Gurion" in trying to prove that it was Ben-Gurion who ordered the use of force against the Altalena. But that is precisely what appears in my book, and by means of the original document. Does this not prove that Gallll wished to demonstrate thereby that my book is one-sided and that important information was omitted?

 Galili mentions that Ben-Garion feared a "putsch" and was concernsd about the international ramifications of the affair. If that was really so, then his fear was a function of the information presented to Ban-Gurlon. And the fact is that hie prime channel of information in this case was none other than Galill himself.

 Finally, I would like to bring to Galili'e attention that Ben-Gurion himself gave me some very important documents to use in my book and the defence minister was to have written an introduction alongside the one by Premler Begin. Apart from Ben-Gurion'e material, I was fortunate to bave received otber material from dozens of people close to Galill or belonging to his circle in those days, man such as Shaul Avigur, Dan Even, Yigael Yadin, Meir Pa'il, Haim Ben-Menahem and others.

I HAVE PROBABLY disappointed Galili, for It is not his varsion that I have adopted. For my part, I was open-minded as far as he was concerned. I tried to give him every opportunity to say what he had to say apart from which, he has in hie possession an historically in-valuable archive. And nevertheless, I did manage to reconstruct substantial aspects of his involvement in the Altalena affair, for after all it is on record in varioue documentary sources, both classified and open. which were available to mc and which are fully reflected in my book. Thus, with all due respect I suggest that in future Galili take greater care when he makes such sharp accusations as to the rewriting of history. After all, if history has not turned out as he wished, no one is to blame except those who made it as it

CONFOUNDING THE CRITICS

WRITERS AND READERS/Sraya Shapiro

Each day eees an average of 10 Hebrew books come off the presses in Israel, printed in between 12 to 13 million copies - but only a fraction of this vast figure is cound commercial investment. With the number of publishers now up to approaximately a hundred, one wonders what subsidies they receive to belp keep their accounts straight.

OFFICIAL STATISTICS indicate that two-thirds of Israel'e over-30s do not read as much as one Hebrew book a year (but four out of five do read a Hebrew daily newspaper). By West European standards, this is not too bad, culture ministry ounclais observe. In this respect, Israel is only disadvantaged by the size of Its population, and hence its potential readership, as compared with more populous nations on the other side of the Mediterranean.

He may, bowever, bs permitted to build more densely on the remaining 60 per cent of his land as some compensation for his loss.

THE TWO LAWS discussed above apply to expropriation of land within the borders of the state, and it is of interest to note that only a small part of the land expropriated since the establishment of the State of Israel belonged to the Arab population. Most expropriated land belonged to the Jewish population of Israel, a very striking example of this being Jcrucalem's Ramat Eshkol neighbourhood, which was built on land expropriated from ecveral Jewish familiee.

In the case of the Beduin in the Negev, their claim to land on which they have lived and grazed their animals for many years, is based on possession, in the absence of any registered ownership. The government, on the other hand, maintains that the unregistered land is state land; according to the provisious of the ordinance the onus would thus fall on the Beduin to rebut this claim.

The government, bowever, has not insisted on its formal rights and has offered the Beduin gencrous compensation, as well as alternative land in exchange for the land required for military and other public purposes.

Even if the Beduin reject this offer, and the land has to be seized against their will by invoking the ordinance. there is no doubt that they will be compensated just as every citizen of Israel is compensated, at least financially, for being deprived of his property.

thie one week in the year. And, they charge, the public holds off its purchases weeks before the annual cale in anticipation of the bargains. The Week does bring in cash, the publishers admit, and this is particlularly important when credits are hard to come by and extremely expensive. But the publishers outlay on the Week is high - extra pay for employece, money spent on the stands, charges, if only partial, for security arrangements. Some publishers go so far as to claim the game is not worth the candle, sven charging that in the long run, the Week is little more than a publicity stumt.

THERE IS MORE public money to Book Week, and to publiching generally, than meets the eye. The budget for the Week tops IL3m. The government and the local authorities make special allocations for the event, and also support many projects designed to encourage creative writing and its publication. The Hebrew Book Council bas spent TI2m, in the last two or three years in printing work which commercial publishers have chied away from as unprofitable. The Tel Aviv Foundation for Arts and Literature and other institutions have similar aims.

ment level of Hebrew writers is also rather low compared with their European counterparts, an observation borne out by the steady drop in interest that the reading public bere shows in original Hebrew writing, with translations faring far better. Subsidies will certainly not remedy this: for while inducements euch as Book Week may push up sales, (one educated guess is that last year's sales may have reached IL40m.) only good writing will arrest the . reader'e interest for more than a page.

WHATEVER CRITICISM may be levelied against Book Week, by way of justified observation or cantankerous carping, it remains a great occasion. First held as part of Ierael'e tentb annivereary celebrations, and built on an idea put forward by the poet Shlomo Tan'i, It was taken up and developed by Mordecbel Bcrneteln, the lmaginative but practical president of the Publishers' Association.

Israelis flock to the stands of Book Week in vast crowds, for, as Bernstein says, "It's really a people's holiday." Contact with books is a virtue in Itself, whether the books are bought or not, for love begins with contact.

OBCHESTRA, with Kyril Kondrashin conducting. Allcia de Larrocha, piano. Brahma: "Tragic" Overture. Mozari: Plano Concerto Ne.25 in C. K. 593. Prokolley: Symphony No.5. Op. 100

ONCE AGAIN, Jerusalem was given the privilege of a first performance in an Israel Philharmonic Orchestra programme ceries - and It was a concert to remember. Both the conductor and the soloist were "from the top drawer." so to speak, and the result was music making of the highest order.

Evan the "Tragic" Overture offered something extra. Not for a long time has any conductor here achieved that characteristic Brahmsian mezzoforts without dragging or dimming the context. This was bigboned conducting, and the orchestra reeponded to make the overture truly symphonic.

The measure of the maestro's style was even more fully chown in the symphony where one was able to hear a Prokofiev who had got far beyond his "Classical" first. The conductor'e bold and subtle drive illumined the many facets of the work, keeping the strands taut without any sacrifice of excitement or eweep.

in movement, cong. dance and pictures

Thers were beroic dimensions in the first movement, "marcato" whimsy in the second, eeductive potency in the adagio (like the composer's "Romeo and Juliet"), and a finale full of bursts of light. It was, in all, a masterly interpretation in which the orchestra was a magnificant instrument. In between came Mozart's concer to, playsd by Alicia de Larrocha with exquisite touch, flawless flexibility and elegant consitiveness. Her pearly runs flowed - to use a favourite phrase of Mozart's -- "like oil."

Tha purity of tone had the highest polish. Clarity at speed was consummate. What was lacking was volume.

The plano was mostly within chamber music dimensions - but then, Mozart didn't create the work for a 3,000-seat hall, and throughout the plano sang at the planist's will.

Throughout, too, the conductor kept the orchastral texture so geared to the soloist that nothing was lost, and the orchestra, when on its own, provided majestic moments.

Emmanuel Gruber, cello. Emmanuel Krasovsky, plano. (Israel Museum, Jane 9). Beethoven: Seven variations on a theme frem "The Magic Flatz." Schumann: Fantasie Sticke Op.73. Mar-tinu: Sousta No.2 (1941). Nuam Sheriff: "Confession", for Cello Solo (1969). Debussy:Sonata for Cello and Piano. Paganini: Variations en One String on a Theme of Rossini.

THOUGH the two Emmanuels, both admirable musicians, choes a rather mixed programms, they did thereby show their wide range.

Their finest collaboration cama in the most significant works - the Martinu and Debussy sonatas. The Czech composer here produced a work of weight and worth, and tha cellist grasped its colsmn tone and its dramatic etrength, while the pianist was the complete partner.

The Debussy was given lighter treatment — quite rightly — and though its whimsles were not always realized, the performance was both spacious and volatile. Tonal quality was beautifully matched.

In the works by Beethoven and Schumann, the planlet was sometimes too robust for the cello, but there could be two reasons for this: The Schumann was actually written for the clarinet, so possibly the cello register couldn't bold its own co well against the plano. Also, both in this and the Beethoven, the cellist ssemed sometimes to handle his bow so that pressure varied too much and the bow ended a phrase short of its full value. The performance was nevertheless animated and interesting.

One could be facetious about Noam Sheriff'e "Confession for Cello Solo" and eay it made bang-andwhimper progress, but it was really a cerious work and was played with wisdom and ekill. So, indeed, was the Peganini (though the harmonice wcre not always impeccable).

The piano part here was written as accompaniment, but from the cello emanated a showpiece, and in the playing something even reminiscent of the celllet Maurice Gendron himself, who transcribed the work for cello and obviously did a splendid iob.

Deadlock in budget fight of Treasury v. local authorities

By ALAN ELSNER Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. - The budgetary dispute hetween the Union of Local Authorities and the Treasury, which has been going on for eeveral months, yesterday reached total deadlock, with both sides sniping at the other from entrenched positions. There is, according to a spokesman of the union, a "better than good possibility" that the municipalities will call a strike of municipal servicee after the union's general assembly next Thursday.

Pinhas Eylon, mayor of Holon and chairman of the union. had threatened to call a services strike within 24 hours, as was announced in most newspapers yesterday.

The Jerusalem Post has learned that the municipalities are almost unanimously in fayour of the strike. The mayors of Tel Aviv, Haifa and Jerusalem all support the idea, while the Association of Development Towns is pushing hard for militant action. Avraham Shohat, chairman of the association and mayor of Arad, told The Post yesterday that all the development towns supported stopping their services to the public. He said that many have not been able to pay the calaries of their workers for several months. Two weeks ago, the development towns decided to stop paying their electricity, water, gas, telephone and postal hills. "We have received an extra IL25m. from the government since then, but this does almost nothing to alleviate our grave financial problems," he said. The municipalities claim that the Treasury is holding up their budgets and that money is not reaching them

Last week the municipalities gave in to the wage demands of 50,000 city workers organized in the Clerks' Union. At that time the Treasury declared that this agreement was outeide the national wage framework and that it would not allow the necessary money to pay for it to reach the municipalities.

Yesterday a Treasury spokesman told The Post that if the wage deal with the Clerks' Union went through, other unions, including the Civil Ser-vants Union, would also demand increases of 15 per cent. "We are total-ly against tt," the spokesman said. "We hope the services strike does not take place, but we do not intend to increase municipal budgets, no matter what bappens.'

At the moment, no attempts at mediation between the two sides are planned and a strike of some or all municipal services seems inevitable at the end of next wsek. Schools, day-care centres and other educational institutions will be closed, while welfare services will cease.

Slow unloading raises cost of imported scrap iron

By YA'ACOV FRIEDLER Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. - A shipload of scrap iron imported from the U.S. by the Koor company'e Steel City in Acre, is running up high costs in the port here, as a result of elow unloading. The scrap arrived on April 24 and unloading is still not completed and will continue for another week at least.

Port manager Moshe Haral told The Jerusalem Post that the importers must bear the full blame for the delay. "eince they ignored our warnings not to use a ship we ean't handle property." Steel City general manager, Uri Bar-Ratzon, on the other hand, rejected the attitude that "the customer is always wrong," and claimed that originally the port management bad given him the green light for bringing in the scrap metal on board the 17,000 ton Cypriot freighter Astynax.

Bar-Ratzon said the original freight bill for the 17,000 tons of scrap had totalled over $500,000, one third of the price of the metal itself. The drawn-out unloading will reportedly add another $200,000 to the bill. Nevertheless, Bar-Ratzon stressed, "we shall still earn on the steel we'll make from the scrap."

Moshe. Haral said that, when the import deal was first broached, he had advised the importers to use a ehallow-draught ship, so that she could herth alongside the port's hig, 25-ton cranes, for quick unloading. Unfortunately his advice had been a deep draught, could be berthed only where the email, three-ton eranes could be used.

These three tons included the special grabs that had to be fitted to the cranes to handle the scrap, so that unloading was proceeding at the rate of only a few bundred tons daily, in two shifts, Haral said. "We'd prefer not to have the job at all, because it's a waste of manpower, but we have to accommodate our customers," he added. Bar-Ratzon claimed that originally the port management had okayed the use of the big ship. Only after she had heen chartered and set out on her way, had the management expressed reservations, and then it was too late. He believed that future shipments would be handled faster, after the port had gained experience and overcome technical difficulties. Steel City now needs 115,000 tons of scrap annually to produce the building iron the country needs. Of this amount 80,000 tons of scrap were purchased in Israel, 'but we must import the rest, until the government passes legislation for the ohligatory sale to us of scrapped cars, which would help us eliminate expensive imports," he said. He noted that hundreds of old cars were abandoned every year along the highwaye. But under the present law, acrap dealers were prevented from picking them up and bringing them to Acre for recycling into steel. Suitable legislation would save the country millions of dollars a year, be representatives from 34 countries debated whether the resources can be developed fast enough to meet growing global chartages of conventional light oil. Complex and costly solutions were outlined for the problems of extrac-

Left unanswered was the question of whether the international community can muster the will, money and manpower needed for largeecale development of the vast resources, which total in the trillions of barrels and appear in more than 60 countries. The 30 delegates, conference organizers admitted, could not agree on a precise acientific definition of where light oil stops and heavy oil

Conference spokesmen said they had made significant progress in their eampaign to draw the attention of government and industry to beavy cil, a resource usually shunned in the past by companies eeeking smooth-flowing, easily-refinable light oil. Just collecting so much expert information in one place, they said, marks a major advance in beavy oil research.

"This first international conference will enter history as the beginning of the heavy crude and tar aands period," said Josepb Barnea of the UN Institute for Training and Research.

Barnes, principal organizer of the conference, said a crash programme of developing oil sands production could eliminate world oil shortages in 18 to 20 years.:

Others said development would be slowed by technological inefficien-cles and huge costs - $4b, for one oil sands plant, Sib. for one heavy oil upgrading plant. The alternative, however, was starkly described by Royal Bank of Canada forecasters, who said oil costs in 15 years would he about four times higher than current prices.

Sharon on the rampage

ISRAELI TV viewers have long since grasped the fact that the Knesset chamber is not exactly a model of parliamentary decorum.

It is more than regrettable that MKs over the years have felt it impossible to refrain from descending to the level of the gutter in what passee for dehate on emotional issues. This more than anything eise has been responsible for the Knesset's ill repute in the eyes of the people.

But yesterday's shameful performance in the House prohabiy surpassed anything of the like that has ever transpired hefore. And this, only a few days after Knesset Speaker Yltzhak Shamir fait impelled to expound in public on the urgent need to take steps to restore the quality and atmosphere of public life to a semblance of decency and effectiveness.

Commentators on the Israel scene, hoth foreigners and natives, are unanimous concerning the high level of aggression to he found in all walks of Israeli life. One does not have to look beyond the Knesset to find, if not the origins of that aggression, at least the source of its legitimation.

Anyone with even a passing acquaintance with Knesset Memhers knows that many legislators would be the first to be profoundly appalled at the comportment of a number of their colleagues. The habits of collegiality are such, however, as to persuade them all to hold their tongues and withhold their rods in the face of those colleagues' antics.

There was no single offender in yesterday's parliamentary descent to scurriloua verbal mayhem. But there is no doubt that Minister of Agriculture Ariel Sharon was primarily responsible for provoking the other members.

He was guilty of obvious racism in his references to TV reporter Rafig Halaby and Shal's MK Zeidan Atsbe who are both Druse. And he was guilty of impugning the loyalty and patriotism of those who disagree with his settlement policy.

He deliberately sought to involve the entire House in a personal free-for-all by referring to the leader of the Opposition as a man who had not served one day in the army.

Mr. Peree' record in the defence of Israei is well known. Sharon, however, should have remembered that his own prime minister never served one day in the army either, nor a minute on the hattle line, although his role in the creation of Israel is no less well known.

Conducting political debate at such a scurrilous level of pereonal attack is a sure way of undermining whatever remains of the effectiveness of Israel parliamentary practice.

Sharon is intent on pushing rapid Israeli settlement in the territories. He is thus espousing a debatable but legitimate point of view in Israel's convoluted political spectrum. The eingleminded ferocity he brings to his task, however, raises the danger of causing more harm to Israel's body politic and social cohesion than is tolerable.

Mr. Begin may be deluded into believing that he has a political asset in a man of this nature. If he does, he is badly mistaken. Sharon should be leashed on a tight rein rather than given carte blanche to run roughshod over Israel.

LABOUR MINISTER Israel Katz wants the marginal tax on incomes of over IL50,000 a month to be increased from the present rate of 60 per cent to 75 per cent.

He gives two reasons: to equalize the tax burden, and to prevent "privileged elements from living in luxury, sometimes even by American standards, when the weak and vulnerable classes of society are charged a kind of 'inflation tax' through cuts in the social services and other hurdene imposed on

It is bad that the rich should live in fantastic lucury while the poor take cuts in their living standards. But raising the marginal rate of income tax to 75 per cent will not solve that probism; indeed, it will probably make the situation worse.

There are countries where income tax on top salaries exceeds 90 per cent, yet 'fantastlc'' wealth abounds. Israel'e big fortunes were made and big villas built when marginal income tax was $7.5 per cent. The explanation is that nobody (or practically nobody) paid 87.5 per cent tax on earned income, and for a very simple reason: Nobody would bother to sarn an incoms that is taxed so highly. No company in its right mind would insult the intelligence of its employees by making what is virtually a free gift - in their (the employese') name - to the Treasury. How then did people become rich? By receiving benefits that were not taxed as incoms - shares in the company, incurance policies. benefits in kind. Should the government block these alternative forms of gain so that a person cannot get out of paying three-quarters of his marginal earnings in tax, then that already bolds.

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post Sir, - I read with great interest your interview of May 18 with Dr. Dov Joseph on the occasion of his soth hirthday. To my great regret, there was no mention in the interview of the historic affair which occurred 45-45 years ago.

I am referring to the murder of Arlosoroff and the ensuing trial on a false charge. Dov Joseph was one of the central figures in the affair. As the lawyer of Mapai and a person who was of great assistance to the prosscution, hs certainly knew and still remembers how the trial was conducted against the three "accused" Revisionists, one of which was my late father.

Dov Joseph is the only one still allve - and may hs live till 120! who can, I believe, reveal the secrets of this trial. Yet this is one thing he does not want to talk about. In 1986, when the historian, Professor Yosef

The Court did not find the charge against the accused, Abraham Stavsky, to be faise, but on the contrary after an exhaustive and fair trial, found him guilty of having taken part in the premeditated killing of Dr. Arlosoroff and sentenced him to the death penalty. The two other ac-cused were acquitted. Stavsky appealed and the Court of Appeal acquitted him on the technicai procedural ground that there was not sufficient corroborative evidence to warrant a conviction. The Court of Appeal added that It, too, believed the evidence of Mrs. Arlosoroff. #### BEAUTIFUL UNIVERSITIES

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post Sir. - The tourist who visits Israell universities is in for a delightful surprise. In other lands, colleges and universities have usually grown haphazardiy; almost always, they present a hodge-podge of architec-tures and a confusion of styles.

Israeli planners and architects have been granted the unique opportunity of locating, planning and creating an entire university, of starting from scratch on their drawing boards. A visit to Haifa, Jerusalem or Tel Aviv, to name hut a few places, will show how imaginatively and thoughtfully the planners and architects of your universities have used their opportunities.

Israeli universities are a delight to behold. Their buildings hlend into a barmonious, comprehensive entity. Each edifice stands in dignity, sur-

the U.S. for building defence installations in the Negev takes the form of loane rather than grants.

Secondly, Israel is dependent on the import of raw materials. Output went up last year by 6 per cent, and is expected to go up by a similar amount this year. Thus the import component in local production increases correspondingly and must be paid for from foreign currency earnings.

If we manage to fulfil the Treasury'e latest five-year plan, exports will increase over the period 1978-83 hy $3h. --- yet imports (excluding armaments) are due to swell by the eame amount. The imports include, naturally, the rising hurden of debt service costs. All in all, if the best expectatione of the Treasury's policymakers are fulfilled, the trade deficit five years from now will he no greater - hut no smaller - than it is today.

Under the circumstancee it would be gratifying if performance could outstrip expectations. There are two man-made obstacles to that. One ie the deelre of eome of our political icadors to hold the exchange-rate in check, so as to keep domestic pricce down.

Export incentivce wcre aboliehed formally by the Likud Government. Inetead they offer a free-floating exchange-rate. Incentives are not practicable any more. It is no longer feasible to subsidize a section of the economy which accounts for more than half the gross national product.

Therefore It is essential to let the exchange-rate find its true level, tu permit the continued growth of Ieraei's exports. The expansion of these exports over the last three decadee, including the period since 1973, when overall growth has been negligible, cunstitutes the fineet euccess of the country's economic policy.

The second danger is the decision hy Minister of Industry Gideon Patt to restrain Imports In order to protect local Industry from excessive competition. He cannot augnent customs to accomplish the came purpose, because Israel has a tariff-cutting agreement with the Common Market.

So he proposes to interfere with imports indirectly, by preventing the purchase of what he calls "cheap ruhlish," hy concentrsting the business in the hands of "licensed importere," and even hy halting imports from countries that do not buy Israel's exports.

This policy will do damage to Israel's balance of payments, hy making imports costlier than they need be. Our industry does not need protecting. Its job is to sell in foreign markets. If a foreign country makes a product cheaper than we can, better to import lt.

Ramat Gan.

Dr. Dev Joseph replice:

Mr. Yosef Ahimeir complains that the interview with ms to which he refers did not deal with the Arlosoroff trial. This was obviously because the purpose of the interview was to question me about the situation in the state now as compared with that in its early years, when I served as a member of the government. My interviewer, guite rightly, did not deal with an occurrence some 15 years before the State was established, of which the great majori-ty of Israel's population have no knowledge; to most of them. Arlosoroff is merely the name of a street. Mr. Abimeir incorrectly states that I was the lawyer of the Mapai. In fact I rspreesnted only Dr. Arlosoroff'e widow, who was the civil claimant in the case. Mapai had no locus standi whatever in the trial. Mr. Ahimeir gives no evidence to support his groundless allegation that the trial was "on a false charge." The trial was conducted by the Court of Criminal Assize preelded over by Mr. Justice O.C.K. Corrie, who enjoyed the reputation

ISRAEL'S MIRACLE

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post Sir. --- It is impossible to discover the Israeli point of view with the most careful perusal of our local and national press, or by listening to the media. One is left with the idea that all the odds are in favour of Israel, and that the poor Arabs don't stand a chance unless other strong powers come to their aid.

would presumably have been rejected and his conviction confirmed. I know of no "eecrets" concerning the trial and have nothing "to reveal" as Mr. Ahimeir suggests. I have consistently refused to he drawn into attempts by Revisionists or others to revive and stir up a public vendetta over the Arlosoroff trial between two rival political parties. Such a controversy would inevitably be based on venomoue haired that existed in those days and which apparently has not yet entirely disappeared, although the Arlosoroff case has been dead and huried for nearly half a century. What Mr. Ahimeir claims would

"clear the air" would, on the contrary, only befoul it. As a lawyer of many years standing, I bave always considered, and still do, that the innocence or guilt of an accused person should be decided. only hy a competent Court of Law and not by members of the public who are frequeotly blased and inadequately informed; especially when they seek to give vent to their political spicen or bave a political axe to grind.

As for Ahimeir's Implication that perhape others were "the truc murderers," there was a contention in the trial that this was so and an Arab named Abdul Meild el Hindi who was in prison on another charge was brought forward to assert that it was he who had murdered Dr. Arlosoroff. After days of examination and cross-examination of this person, the Court found him to be an unmitigated liar. I sharsd the Court's opinion. It was thought at the time that he had been given or promised a large sum of money for his family if he would fabricate his evidence in order to help free Stavsky. He himself alleged this at the trial. Despite his evidence, the Court of Criminal Assize held that Staveky was guilty.
